

Role Play Scenarios

Each person will receive one of the following scenarios to create a role play to perform with help from your group members. You will need to create a skit that illustrates responses for the following communication styles. Responses need to be realistic and school appropriate. Be sure to include the characteristics (facial expressions, body language, etc.) associated with each communication style (see your notes).

- Passive:
- Aggressive:
- Assertive:

Your boss asks you to stay late for the third time this week while all the other employees get to leave on time.

You are waiting in line to check out at the store and someone jumps the line ahead of you.

Someone at school is making inappropriate jokes that you find offensive.

Your roommate constantly leaves his/her dirty dishes in the sink and on the counter making it difficult for you to prepare your meals.

You are preparing for an important exam and your best friend shows up unannounced and wants to go out.

You are out to dinner with friends and after waiting a very long time for your food, the waiter tells you the order was never placed.

You are sharing an office with a colleague who continuously talks to you instead of working and it's keeping you from doing your job.

You had plans for the weekend and your parents just made plans to meet up with a friend who is coming to town and they need you to watch your younger siblings.

Your friend wants to borrow money to buy shoes because he/she left their wallet at home. Your friend swears to pay you back soon, unlike the last time.

Your neighbor is adding an addition to their house and the crew starts working very loudly at 5 AM. It has woken you up every day for a week.

A friend asks to borrow your car. Not only will this be an inconvenience to you but they don't have the best driving record.
